Editorial

The main news to report this year is the move of the Editorial Office of the BJHP to King's College London. Having been re-elected at the last AGM of the BSHP to serve as Editor of the BJHP for a second 5-year period, I am delighted that the Department of Philosophy at King's College London will be hosting the journal in the next phase of its life. King's has exceptional strength across the full range of history of philosophy, and I look forward to running the journal in this new environment. I would like to thank the Department of Philosophy at the University of York for the support that they have given me over the last five years, and especially Dominic Shaw and Joshua Cockayne, who have served so efficiently as Editorial Assistants. Katharine O'Reilly has been appointed as our new Editorial Assistant and I welcome her to the Editorial Team. All books for review should now be sent to King's College London.

Last year saw two more special issues published, one on 'Idealism and Pragmatism' edited by Robert Stern (23.4) and one on 'Monadologies' edited by Pauline Phemister and Jeremy Dunham (23.6). I would like to thank the three guest editors for all their work as well as the contributors for the two very interesting collections of papers that resulted. Special issues planned for this year are on 'Relations in the Medieval Traditions of Logic and Metaphysics', edited by John Marenbon, and 'Early Modern Materialism', edited by Patricia Springborg and Falk Wunderlich.

There are two key changes to report in our production team at Taylor and Francis. In June last year Heather Gibson took over from Ben Wilcox as Production Editor, and in October George Cooper replaced Lucy Sheach as Managing Editor. I would like to thank Ben and Lucy for their help in the eighteen months that we worked together. I am also grateful to the Associate Editors of the journal, members of the Editorial and Advisory Boards, and all the many referees who report for us, which not only ensures the high quality of the articles that appear in the BJHP but also makes editing the journal rewarding and energizing.

The key journal statistics for last year are similar to those in 2014. We received over 300 submissions and published 50 articles and 2 discussion notes. Excluding the special issues, the acceptance rate has thus remained constant at around 12%. The average length of time between submission and first decision was around 50 days, and between submission and final decision around 60 days. Over 95% of first decisions were made within 3 months.

I end with my usual encouragement to all those interested in the history of philosophy to join the British Society for the History of Philosophy (bshp.org.uk), whose official journal the BJHP is. Full annual membership of the Society, which includes subscription to the BJHP (six issues a year, including the two special issues) is available for just £45 within Europe or £50 outside Europe.
